by ROBERT E. STANSFIELD

John Chancellor, the NBC newsman, narrates "The Science of Spying" on Tuesday (10-11 p.m. Chs 10, 22, 30), a special report on the clandestine, highly technological and often misunderstood practice of espionage by America and other world powers. There will be filmed interviews with agents active in Washington, Hong Kong, Formosa, Okinawa, Japan and Central America.

The program examines the ethics of spying, considers charges that America's Central Intelligence Agency is carrying out its own foreign policy, and studies the scope of operatives' work.

In Washington Chancellor will interview Allen Dulles, former CIA chief and Richard Bissell, a former director of plans for the agency.
